Strange Object Is Found On Shores Of Kentucky Lake

Mr. and Mrs. Vester Ransom found a strange object on their farm near Johnny Reed's store on the East side of the county. Yesterday they brought it to the office of Sheriff Brigham Putrell.

The object apparently was the property of the Armed Forces Signal Corps. It was found hanging by a rope from a tree on Mr. Ransom's farm. It was a rather square object about five inches square, enclosed in a white plastic case with a long clear plastic cone projecting from it.

The thing seemed to be extensively wired and had the words "Radio Sonde Modulator" printed on the side.

The top of the white plastic case could be opened. Inside there were many wires and a scale of some type. Apparently a needle had travelled across the scale registering some information.

The device was not ticking or emitting any noise when found by Mr. Ransom. The object had both a balloon and a paper parachute attached to it.

Mr. Ransom said that he would retain the object in the event some agency of the Armed Forces called for it.

Several solutions for its use were forwarded by bystanders.

Work is progressing on the two lift stations, one at Sycamore and 15th, and the other on Chestnut behind the stadium.

They will be in operation soon.

The heavy fog yesterday was caused by the cold air coming into contact with the warmer earth. That's not official, but it sounds pretty good.

We were the man of the hour yesterday when we took four of D's kites home to the kids.

Naturally we got four different colors. The only sloup we made was that we only got three balls of twine instead of four. Seems as though everyone needs a full ball of twine.

We floured the smallest would never get his off the ground, but we learned that has nothing to do with it. It's just a matter of principle.

Smallest learned to tie his shoe strings finally which brought on loud cries of "I can do it." We figured his cries were similar to those of Archimedes when he shouted "Eureka."

Anyhow we had to sit through several demonstrations which further bolstered the faith of the smallest.

Come to think of it, it is a pretty complicated procedure which we all know for granted, just because we know how.

Take a good carpenter for example. He goes about his work usually not giving too much thought about how difficult the task is. If you try it, you get fouled up immediately.

Letter To Editor

Mr. James Williams, Editor
The Ledger and Times
Murray, Kentucky

Dear Jim:

(1) What is the main purpose in teaching and providing a place for teen agers to dance? This amounts to asking, what is the main attraction found in dancing? Is it for exercise? Most everyone will agree that this is not the case. Is it for the social intercourse of meeting and talking with friends? Again, the answer is no, for if otherwise, why bother with elaborate preparations usually connected with a dance, or Teen Town? The real attraction is sex appeal. What man goes to a dance to dance with other men? Have any invitations been given for women only to attend the dance? All the dangers to the Christian found in dancing are directly connected with this major attraction. How many people can dance with members of the opposite sex and not have thoughts of "wanton" movements, "indecent" bodily movements, "chase" handling of males and females, etc. Do you believe the Bible?

(2) How can supervision of dances control the minds of those people actually engaged in dancing? That is, how do you know that they are not thinking evil thoughts, that according to statistics revealed through the FBI, which are carried out offenses right after the dance?

(3) Who can supervise those who, after learning to enjoy dancing at "Teen Town" or school, later desire to visit the places where dances are held on a large scale (or in roadside taverns) wholly without supervision? You parents invite your children to visit such places by teaching them to like the environment there through introducing them to it in a small way.

We have heard considerable talk about putting Christ back in "Christmas", etc., but little, if any at all, about putting him in our lives, and the lives of our children. If Christ were upon earth now, do you think he would approve of and participate in the modern dance? (1 Pet. 2:21; 1 Cor. 11:1). All of us know that he would not, but would denounce it severely as he does through the Bible.

If dancing parents, or those that danced when they were teen agers, would think back in their own lives, they would think three times before letting a son or daughter engage in the modern dance. Likewise, all right thinking parents will be able to see the end result of their lack of providing a home for their children's entertainment rather than having a "special" place where they will be schooled in immoral acts.

Let me clarify one point. I do not think that every boy and girl that engages in the modern dance is an immoral person, not at all. There are some very fine and sincere people who dance, but even so it is an unnecessary and dangerous temptation. Many times these people have not thought about the temptation involved and the warnings expressed in the scriptures. Is it possible to dance and at the same time feed Paul's admonition in 1 Thess. 5:22, "Abstain from all appearance of evil?"

Sincerely,

Ernest Clevenger, Jr.

President Like This Week's Balance Sheet Any Man In A New House

By MERRIMAN SMITH
United Press Staff Writer

GETTYSBURG, Pa., (AP) — President Eisenhower is like any other man with a new house. He has to check with his wife on what color to paint the barn.

For nearly an hour on his Gettysburg farm Friday, the President worked with a painter to get just the right shade for the huge barn which looked like a pastel green in the late winter afternoon sun.

The house is mostly white, and the old red barn would have been an eyesore without a new coat of paint. The President thought first of painting the barn white, too, but he decided the huge structure would dominate the house.

So, he had a painter, Carl Mauss of nearby York, Pa., mix white with a little green, blue and yellow. They came up with a shade which looked like a pastel green in the late winter afternoon sun.

The President was satisfied, but he told Mauss:

"We'll have to ask Mrs. Ike. She'll have the last word, anyway."

Like a dutiful husband and new householder, the President, his tan camel's hair topcoat flapping in the breeze, strode across a muddy field back to the house where Mrs. Eisenhower was deep in conference with Elizabeth Draper, the New York interior decorator.

Sounds of "oohs" and "ahs" filtered from the upstairs windows as the ladyfolks looked at curtain material and moved chairs around in an elaborate game of furniture arrangement.

The President and Mrs. Ike came to the window. He pointed toward the barn which by now resembled a nursery school exercise in finger painting. Painter Mauss had tried dabs of varying green shades all over one end of the barn, on top of white trim and on the old red finish itself.

The Right Mixture

There was some animated conversation in the upstairs window and the President reappeared in the yard a few minutes later.

"That's just right," he told Mauss. The President drove here from Washington Friday and plans to return sometime late Sunday. The farm house is completed, structurally and the first family is now engaged in decoration and placement of furnishings.

"When will it be ready?" a reporter asked the President. The ancient house has undergone extensive renovation for more than a year.

The week's good and bad news on the international balance sheet:

The Good

1. Delegates of eight Allied countries met in Bangkok, Thailand, to establish permanent machinery for their new Southeast Asia Treaty Organization, aimed against Communist aggression.

They agreed to make Bangkok the "SEATO" headquarters and to set up a permanent council to handle treaty problems. They agreed to cooperate closely in combating Communist subversive activities, which are a serious danger in Thailand, Indochina and other Southeast Asia areas. The delegates agreed also to study means of raising living standards, recognizing that poverty nourishes Communism.

2. The West German parliament passed its final debate on the ratification of the Paris treaty and to set a goal for West German rearmament. Chancellor Konrad Adenauer was confident he could get the ratification vote despite the opposition of Socialists, Communists and labor unions. Hundreds of riot police guarded the parliament building in Bonn against Communist demonstrators who surged into the center of the city.

3. President Adnan Menderes of Turkey arrived in Baghdad, Iraq, for the signing of the Turkish-Iraqi defense treaty which will strengthen the defense of the free countries against Communist aggression. Egypt failed to block the treaty, which it holds is a violation of Iraq's obligations under the Arab League agreement. It is reported that Turkey and Pakistan are now trying to form a big alliance which would include Iran, Syria and Lebanon.

The Bad

1. Radical Socialist Edgar Faure was confirmed as France's 21st premier in a gloomy atmosphere which seemed to portend months more of unstable French government. There were indications that Faure, trying to hold together a coalition cabinet, would have Pierre Mendes-France, his predecessor, for an enemy instead of a friend. Though they are members of the same party, Mendes-France seems to feel that he alone can lead France through its present troubles.

2. Dispatches from Formosa indicated that the Chinese Nationalists might have to abandon Nanchi, their island outpost off the Communist-held mainland 140 miles north of Formosa. Civilians already were being taken to Formosa. The fate of the Matsui and Quency island groups directly opposite Formosa remained in doubt. But Prime Minister Winston Churchill told the House of Commons that Britain will not aid in their defense even if the United States does.

3. Marshall Georgi K. Zhukov, who was praised as such a nice fellow when he was named Soviet defense minister, seems as might have been expected to be just another Communist. In an order of the day issued on the occasion of the annual Russian Army-navy day, Zhukov vigorously denounced the United States and its "monopolists" as war mongers.

Captured Chinese To Be Returned

MANILA, P. I. (AP) — Six shipwrecked Chinese fishermen from Communist-held Hainan Island will be returned Tuesday by the American Red Cross as a suggestion to Peiping, that it do the same with the 15 American airmen it now holds.

A seventh fisherman from the same group has flatly refused to be repatriated to Red China, Clark said. Five men have been stranded at the American air base since their rescue from tiny Triton Island last summer.

Crittenden Gets 30 Points; Will Meet Eastern Tonight

By UNITED PRESS

A fantastic one-man show by Howie Crittenden carried Murray State to a 77-72 upset over Western Kentucky in the semi-finals of the Ohio Valley Conference Tournament at Louisville last night.

Crittenden, with some assistance from Dick Kinder, spent the majority of the second half dribbling the ball while Western defenders chased, and usually fouled him.

The result was that Crittenden sank 12 free throws in the second half, a total of 20 in the game and wound up with an overall 30 points.

His ball control was so tight that the Hilltoppers, who led 41-39 at halftime, could score only eight points in the first 10 minutes of the second period.

Three Western players fouled out of the game, Owen Lawson, Ralph Crosthwaite, and Lynn Cole of Paducah.

Forrest Able was thrown out of the game in the first half, when he came up with fists flying toward Crittenden. Able was missed since he had led a Western comeback early in the game with a basket from the side and three more goals from 35 to 40 feet out.

Murray hit 19 of 56 field goals, 39 of 54 free throws. Western connected with 24 of 69 field goal attempts and hit 24 of 36 foul shots.

A trio composed of Lioness C. Lowry, Lioness Carlos Jones and guest, Mrs. Paul Perdue, sang "Red Sails In The Sunset" and "Shortening Bread." They were accompanied by Miss Shirley Joyce Chiles.

The program closed with a toast to the Lions. The George Washington theme was carried out in the decorations.

Seniors Sweep
MHS Tournament

The Senior Girls and the Senior Boys sweep the intramural tournament last night at Murray High School. The girls won 39-18 and the boys won 26-12.

Workman was high for the boys and Patsy Buchanan was high for the girls. Workman left the game in the third quarter when a stray elbow broke his glasses.

Guards: Able 12, Cole 8, Clark 4, Lawson 2, Bach 8.

Eastern won over Morehead 91 to 76, after a smoothworking Eastern squad tightened down in the second half to squelch Morehead scorers.

Jack Adams led Eastern with 26 points. Pellegrin and Culbertson got 13 each.

Eastern jumped to an early 14 point lead, but Morehead rallied to tie the game up 35-35 and later 37-37. Halftime score was Morehead 40-Eastern 43.

Many Chapel Programs Held

From The Murray High Tiger

On Tuesday, January 11, 1955, Supt. W. Z. Carter opened the chapel program by reading the scripture and leading the student body in prayer. He then introduced Rev. Paul Lyles, minister of the First Methodist Church. Rev. Lyles made an interesting talk on how to distinguish right from wrong and why right is right and why wrong is wrong.

Mildred Gass then announced that June Fay had won the state cherry-pie-baking contest and was now eligible to enter the National Contest in Chicago.

After making several announcements, Principal W. B. Moser dismissed the student body.

The Tri-Hi-Y club presented the chapel program on January 18. Shirley Joyce Chiles read from the scripture and led in prayer.

Louise Jones introduced the cast of "The Admiral's Daughter," a one act play. This was the story of a group of pre-school students of whom the admiral's daughter was one. It was a big week because of the christening of a ship at which Nina, the admiral's daughter, and several of her friends were to take part. But Nina, being very spoiled, broke the rules of the dormitory and was not allowed out of the school. She picked the girl she liked most to take her place and this was the girl who had tried to keep her from breaking the rule. The cast included Henrietta Warren, Lita Tucker, Anita Rowland, Rosemary Jones, Sandra Fyle, and Freddie Shoemaker.

After making announcements, Mr. Moser dismissed the students.

The Seventh Grade presented the chapel program on January 22. President Billy Kooperudd read the Bible and led in prayer.

A one act play entitled "The Pied Piper of Hamelin" was presented. Katie Bailey made the introductions. The Pied Piper was played by Donnie Henson. Jimmy Outland was the crippled boy on the street and the townsmen were played by Roger Evans, Ronnie Henson, and Tommy Shirley. The student body certainly enjoyed this well presented program.

After Principal W. B. Moser made the announcements, the report cards were given out and chapel was dismissed.

Seen & Heard Around MURRAY

Job Hale, the Superintendent of the Murray Water Works is doing good job.

Job Hale, who is a young man, has spent six years in this department. He of these he spent under the direction of Dewey Jones, former superintendent. This past year Job has been the head man.

The job gets bigger each day, because Murray just keeps expanding. He it was nine years ago this month that we came to Murray and we will remember the city limits only went out to 12th street.

Now they go to 18th, and have moved in all other directions several hundred feet.

When the current water and sewer program is completed, Murray will have one of the most modern water and sewer systems of any town its size.

Work is progressing on the two 18th stations, one at Sycamore and 15th, and the other on Chestnut behind the stadium.

They will be in operation soon.

The heavy fog yesterday was caused by the cold air coming into contact with the warmer earth. That's not official, but it sounds pretty good.

We were the man of the hour yesterday, when we took four of D's kites home to the kids.

Naturally we got four different colors. The only thing we made was that we only got three balls of twine instead of four. Seems as though everyone needs a full ball of twine.

We figured the smallest, would never get his off the ground, but we learned that has nothing to do with it. It's just a matter of principle.

By the time we learn the tricks of the trade all the kids will be grown up.

Smallest learned to tie his shoe strings finally which brought on loud cries of "I can do it." We figured his cries were similar to those of Archimedes when he shouted, "Eureka."

Anyhow we had to sit through several demonstrations which further bolstered the faith of the smallest.

Come to think of it, it is a pretty complicated procedure which we all take for granted, just because we know how.

Take a good carpenter for example. He goes about his work usually not giving too much thought about how difficult the task is. If you try it, you get fouled up immediately.

Strange Object Is Found On Shores Of Kentucky Lake

Mr. and Mrs. Vester Ransom found a strange object on their farm near Johnny Reed's store on the East side of the county, yesterday. They brought it to the office of Sheriff Brigham Futrell.

The object apparently was the property of the Armed Forces Signal Corps. It was found hanging by a paper parachute in a tree on Mr. Ransom's farm. It was a rather square object about five inches square, enclosed in a white plastic case with a long clear plastic cone projecting from it.

The thing seemed to be extensively wired and had the words "Radio Sonde Modulator" printed on the side.

The top of the white plastic case could be opened, inside there were many wires and a scale of some type. Apparently a needle had travelled across the scale registering some information.

The device was not ticking or emitting any noise when found by Mr. Ransom. The object had both a balloon and a paper parachute attached to it.

Mr. Ransom said that he would retain the object in the event some agency of the Armed Forces called for it.

Several solutions for its use were forwarded by bystanders.

Civil War Vet Hospitalized

DULUTH, Minn., Feb. 26 (AP) — Albert Woolson, the last survivor of the Union Army in the Civil War, was hospitalized with a "lung congestion" and was given oxygen here.

Woolson, who celebrated his 108th birthday Feb. 11, was reported "resting very comfortably" at St. Luke's Hospital.

His doctor, who asked not to be identified, said through a hospital spokesman only that Woolson had a "lung congestion" and that the veteran "didn't smoke his cigar today as usual."

The hardy old gentleman joined "Abe Lincoln's Army" as a drummer boy at 16 and was assigned to the 1st Minnesota Heavy Artillery Regiment.

Missionary Will Speak Here March 8-9

Miss Carolyn Teague, who served as a missionary in Japan for more than forty years, will be in the Murray sub-district on March 8-9 to address student and church groups, including the Student Center, Murray High, Hazel, Kirksey, and Lynn Grove High Schools. She will speak in the chapel of the new educational building of the Methodist Church in Murray March 9 at 7:30.

Miss Teague retired as a missionary in 1953 and is now living in Hartell, Alabama. She was graduated from Snead Junior College, Scranton College and from Cincinnati Kindergarten Training School.

Of her work she says, "entering Japan in 1912, I dedicated my life to the work of Christian Kindergartens. Believing deeply in the power of the child in the home and the truth that a little child shall lead them, I centered my strength on reaching the entire family through the child. The results have brought great joy during my 40 years of service."

Just before she left Japan, Miss Teague received from the Emperor the Fifth Order of the Sacred Treasure of Japan. This was the Government's way of saying thank you to her and the churches of the United States for sending missionaries to help them know the Christian way.

The public is invited to come hear Miss Teague speak at the places named, and are especially urged to be present at the Methodist Church.

Letter To Editor

Mr. James Williams, Editor
The Ledger and Times
Murray, Kentucky

Dear Jim:

(1) What is the main purpose in teaching and providing a place for teen agers to dance? This amounts to asking, what is the main attraction found in dancing? Is it for exercise? Most everyone will agree that this is not the case. Is it for the social intercourse of meeting and talking with friends? Again, the answer is no, for if otherwise, why bother with elaborate preparations usually connected with a dance, or Teen Town? The real attraction is sex appeal! What men goes to a dance to dance with other men? Have any invitations been given for women only to attend the dance? All the dangers to the Christian found in dancing are directly connected with this major attraction. How many people can dance with members of the opposite sex and not have thoughts of indecent bodily movements, unchaste handling of males and females, etc.? Do you believe the Bible?

(2) How can supervision of dances control the minds of those people actually engaged in dancing? That is, how do you know that they are not thinking evil thoughts, that according to statistics revealed through the FBI, which are carried out oftentimes eight after the dance?

(3) Who can supervise those who, after learning to enjoy dancing at "Teen Town" or school, later desire to visit the places where dances are held on a large scale (or in roadside taverns) wholly without supervision? You parents invite your children to visit such places by teaching them to like the environment there through introducing them to it in a small way.

We have heard considerable talk about putting Christ back in "Christmas", etc., but little, if any at all about putting him in our lives, and the lives of our children. If Christ were upon earth now, do you think he would approve of and participate in the modern dance? (1 Pet. 2:2; 1 Cor. 11:1). All of us know that he would not, but would denounce it severely as he does through the Bible.

If dancing parents, or those that danced when they were teen agers, would think back in their own lives, they would think three times before letting a son or daughter engage in the modern dance. Likewise, all right thinking parents will be able to see the end result of their lack of providing a home for their children's entertainment rather than having a "special" place where they will be schooled in immoral acts.

Let me clearly one point. I do not think that every boy and girl that engages in the modern dance is an immoral person, not at all. There are some very fine and sincere people who dance, but even so it is an unnecessary and dangerous temptation. Many times these people have been thought about the temptation involved and the warnings expressed in the scriptures. Is it possible to dance and at the same time heed Paul's admonition in 1 Thess. 5:22, "Abstain from all appearance of evil?"

Sincerely,
Ernest Clevenger, Jr.

President Like Any Man In A New House

By MERRIMAN SMITH
United Press White House Writer

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AP) — President Eisenhower is like any other man with a new house. He has to check with his wife on what color to paint the barn.

For nearly an hour on his Gettysburg farm Friday, the President worked with a painter to get just the right shade for the huge barn which looks like a pastel green in the late winter afternoon sun.

The house is mostly white, and the old red barn would have been an eyesore without a new coat of paint. The President thought first of painting the barn white, too, but he decided the huge structure would dominate the house.

So, he had a painter, Carl Mauss of nearby York, Pa., mix white with a little green, blue and amber. They came up with a shade which looked like a pastel green in the late winter afternoon sun.

The President was satisfied, but he told Mauss, "We'll have to ask Mrs. Ike. She'll have the last word, you know."

Like a dutiful husband and new householder, the President, his tan camel's hair topcoat flapping in the breeze, strode across a muddy field back to the house where Mrs. Eisenhower was deep in conference with Elizabeth Draper, the New York interior decorator.

Sounds of "oohs" and "ahs" filtered from the upstairs windows as the ladyfolks looked at certain material and moved chairs around in an elaborate game of furniture arrangement.

The President and Mrs. Ike came to the window. He pointed toward the barn which by now resembled a nursery school exercise in finger painting. Painter Mauss had tried dabs of varying green shades all over one end of the barn, on top of white trim and on the old red finish itself.

There was some animated conversation in the upstairs window and the President disappeared in the yard a few minutes later.

"That's just right," he told Mauss. "The President drove here" Washington Friday and plans to return sometime late Sunday. The farm house is completed structurally and the first family is now engaged in decoration and placement of furnishings.

"When will it be ready?" a reporter asked the President. The ancient house has undergone extensive renovation for more than a year.

This Week's Balance Sheet In The Hot And Cold Wars

By CHARLES M. McCANN
United Press Staff Correspondent

The week's good and bad news on the international balance sheet:

The Good
1. Delegates of eight Allied countries met in Bangkok, Thailand, to establish permanent machinery for their new Southeast Asia Treaty Organization, aimed against Communist aggression. They agreed to make Bangkok the "SEATO" headquarters and to set up a permanent council to handle treaty problems. They agreed to cooperate closely in combating Communist subversive activities, which are a serious danger in Thailand, Indochina and other Southeast Asia areas. The delegates agreed also to study means of raising living standards, recognizing that poverty nourishes Communism.

The Bad
1. Radical Socialist Edgar Faure was confirmed as France's 21st premier in a gloomy atmosphere which seemed to portend months more of unstable French government. There were indications that Faure, trying to hold together a coalition cabinet, would have Pierre Mendes-France, his predecessor, for an enemy instead of a friend even though they are members of the same party. Mendes-France seems to feel that he alone can lead France through its present troubles.

2. Dispatches from Formosa indicated that the Chinese Nationalists might have to abandon Nanchi, their island outpost off the Communist-held mainland 140 miles north of Formosa. Civilian already were being taken to Formosa. The fate of the Matsui and Quemoy island groups directly opposite Formosa remained in doubt.

3. President Adnan Menderes of Turkey was praised as such a nice fellow when he was named Soviet defense minister, seems as might have been expected to be just another Communist. In an order of the day issued on the occasion of the annual Russian army-navy day, Zhukov vigorously denounced the United States and its "monopolists" as war mongers.

Mr. Malcolm said that fog was so heavy he did not see the truck. Mr. Malcolm was going to New Concord to see his father who is seriously ill.

Mr. Linn was treated and released and Verlyn will be released today to go home.

The condition of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm could not be determined.

Crittenden Gets 30 Points; Will Meet Eastern Tonight

By UNITED PRESS

A fantastic one-man show by Howie Crittenden carried Murray State to a 77-72 upset over Western Kentucky in the semi-finals of the Ohio Valley Conference Tournament at Louisville last night.

Crittenden, with some assistance from Dick Kinder, spent the majority of the second half dribbling the ball while Western defenders chased, and usually fouled him.

The result was that Crittenden sank 12 free throws in the second half, a total of 20 in the game and wound up with an overall 30 points.

His ball control was so tight that the Hilltoppers, who led 41-39 at halftime, could score only eight points in the first 10 minutes of the second period.

Three Western players fouled out of the game, Owen Lawson, Ralph Crosthwaite, and Lynn Cole of Paducah.

Forrest Able was thrown out of the game in the first half, when he came up with fists flying toward Crittenden. Able was missed since he had led a Western comeback early in the game with a basket from the side and three more goals from 35 to 40 feet out.

Murray hit 19 of 56 field goals tries and on 39 of 54 free throws. Western connected with 24 of 69 field goal attempts and hit 24 of 36 foul shots.

ZHUKOV IS A COMMUNIST

Immediately after the attack on Russia which produced Joseph Stalin, Zhukov, from that and another of Russian leadership, in the office of Defense Minister, we find a wave of sentimentalism as to the possibility of a greater degree of co-existence.

It must take Russian Zhukov long to forget all wonderful thinking about that one in fact just long enough to give Russia's current propaganda agents, time to circulate as many nasty remarks about the United States as possible.

Due to the past association Zhukov had with decent people it is surprising the propaganda boys couldn't write something new for him to shake the world with.
Branding us as "war-mongers" is about as "corny" as even the late "Good Old Joe Stalin" could do.

It is interesting to note the manner in which the Marshal attacked us, also the occasion. He charges us with planning another world war in an order of the day to celebrate Soviet Army and Navy Day. This would seem to indicate Russia's armed forces need a little reassurance every now and then.

Under the old regime border incidents were arranged to demonstrate Russia is in mortal danger of attack by the United States, but Russian army, navy, and air force personnel are so dumb they repeatedly "goofed" and made themselves ridiculous in the eyes of the world, to say nothing of the Russian and Chinese people.

It is hard to arrange border incidents with people who are as careful, as considerate and as tolerant as we have been. Also the Russians have always been smart when it comes to knowing how far to go. Some folks can be pushed just so far, and no further and the Berlin blockade was a demonstration Russians will never forget.

It seems Zhukov was chosen as Defense Minister for the opposite reason some in the country hoped. They didn't select him to please us but to use against us. They just figured Russians would come nearer believing him when he brands us as "war-mongers."

Why Not Join SCD Asks Williams

By WAYNE WILLIAMS

The question is raised regularly
... "Why isn't every landowner a cooperating member of his local Soil Conservation District?" ... In analyzing the problem, three considerations are usually reached. Some farmers have the knowledge and ability to operate without assistance of any kind. Some farmers are prejudiced against such locally operated programs. Most farmers just do not know what their District is or what it can do. The majority of farm people can be helped by the following explanation:

WHAT is a Soil Conservation District?
A true example of local self-government, people working together to solve their own problems in their own way.

A subdivision of state government established by vote of landowners within some area.

Supervised by five locally elected farmers, having no salary or political title.

With the responsibility to establish and recommend land use policies and treatments.

WHY were Soil Conservation Districts formed?
Erosion in the USA is destroying productive land at the rate of 500,000 acres each year.

This is a land on which 160,000-000 people are dependent for food, clothing, and shelter.

The national population is increasing at rate of 2,000,000 each year.

There are now less than 2 3/4 acres of cropland per person in the United States.

Three-fourths of Kentucky's land area is seriously damaged by erosion today.

HOW do Soil Conservation Districts operate?
Work directly with individual farmers at no cost to them.

Develops a consciousness on the part of all people for a need for conservation of soil and water resources.

Doctor at the CROSSROADS by ELIZABETH SEIFERT

CHAPTER THIRTY-ONE

FRED stayed in the Kyle house for an hour, doing what must be done. At noon, he went upstairs for his bag. "Murphy," he said, "I asked you if you had done all you could to save Theo Kyle. But you didn't, did you?"

"Well, Fritz..."

"I know that you did not give him adrenalin. And I know what you did give him."

"Would you have done different?"

"That's hard to tell, Fred," he asked. "I believe I would have tried adrenalin. It might not have worked, but..."

"I'm sorry, doctor, if you disagree with my treatment."

Fred looked around the room to see if he were forgetting anything. "I hope you won't say any more about his having got hold of alcohol," Fred told Murphy.

Murphy shrugged. "That sounds like an order."

"It is, if you like. I'd hate certain people to catch on to that suggestion. There's no truth in it, but there wouldn't need to be."

"Certain people named Mirandy?" Murphy's teeth glistened in his dark face.

Fred did not reply.

"I didn't get Mirandy in on the Nieneber affair, you know?" Fred nodded. "Yes, I do know. Because you knew where the baby was."

"Have you talked to Mirandy?"

"Yes. She drove me over here."

Murphy's eyes sparkled. "Oh, not really! What did you say to her?"

"Nothing. I didn't need to. And, anyway, she didn't give me a chance." Fred smiled wryly. "She was busy explaining about her experiment in the rapid growth and travel of gossip. She had attempted to stop the wildfire by appealing to Ed Byrd." She had also protested her undying love and affection for Fred.

"Do you believe that?"

"I don't believe any of it. I do think, though, that even Mirandy was shocked when the matter came into court. But, of course, that turned out to be the quickest way to squash the whole thing. Let's go downstairs, shall we?"

"Fred..."

Suddenly, Fred was very tired, as if the weight of the whole morning had descended in a mass upon him. "Please," he said wearily, "let's not speak again about Theo Kyle, Murphy. The thing's done, and nothing can be gained by discussing it."

"A quick, merciful death was God's blessing."

"God was not in this house today, Murphy."

"But just the same, death was the right thing, the just thing, for everyone concerned. I believe Theo himself longed for it."

"Maybe so," said Fred, going out into the hall.

Although he agreed with Murphy in the abstract, the whole situation bothered Fred. He took it home with him, and under its cloud, he scarcely spoke during lunch. Murphy and Katie chattered idly, and let him alone. Katie asked if it would be all right if he went over to see Linda, later that afternoon.

"Yes, she'll expect you to."

"You look so tired, Fred."

"I am tired."

"If you are not too busy, perhaps you could manage a nap this afternoon. You were called out so early."

He blinked, trying to remember. "I'll see..." he said vaguely, kissing her.

He drove to the hospital, but sat for five minutes out in the car, thinking.

He wished he had not asked Murphy to come to Jennings! Looking back, he couldn't see why he had sent for him. He knew what was wrong with Theo Kyle; he knew what might be done for the man, up to and including the measure which Murphy had taken this morning. Had he expected that Murphy would have Fred sent for his friend to avoid the temptation of doing the very thing that had been done? Did Murphy think that was why Fred wanted him?

And was it?

He sat looking at the spotted windshield, at the grass and the shed to be seen through it—and his mind, his conscience, his knowing self labored to judge this matter honestly.

Murphy had decided at once that Fred was in love with Linda. He was not... But did he love her? That was somewhat different, and did he? That answer had to be yes. He did love her, cherish her—but it was as if that love existed in a different incarnation for the two of them. As if they loved each other, man and woman, as characters in a different book from the one he wrote with Katie. The book of Linda and Fred Beier was one to be read and considered and set aside. Both he and Linda knew that it could never come to a breathing, living actuality.

Theo Kyle had died at noon on Friday. Linda wanted the funeral to be a private one on Saturday. But the Kyle name was too big in the state to permit that. Many great men wanted to do Theo honor. The time was set for Sunday afternoon, with an official dedication from the state legislature to be sent to Jennings.

Meanwhile, the town marked time. Fred Beier worked as usual. He had the Dudley child on Friday evening. He left home early on Saturday to see that she got safely on her way to Denver. As he left the house, he told Katie that he was going to operate on "old McFadden."

She laughed. "I've heard that before..."

"I know. But today's the day. Tell Murphy if he wants to come over..."

So Katie told Murphy, explaining to him about "old McFadden" and the service his breakfast. It was a gusty spring morning, and Katie made a pretty picture in her ging-ham house dress, the shining coffee pot in her hands, her fresh-baked stolen fragrant with cinnamon and sugar. Murphy told her so, and she frowned in pleased reproach.

"Let me tell you about McFadden," she insisted. "Fred wants you to come over. At least, he said you could if you were interested. But if he really is going to cut off that old man's foot..."

"All right, Katie!" laughed Murphy. "Let's go back again to the beginning. Old McFadden—he didn't have a farm."

"Oh, no. He was a prospector. That is, he was, in his early days. Fred said he got old and sort of lived in the past—a couple of years ago he took over a hunting shack up in Missouri canyon and prospected. He'd come into town once a month for his pension check—he'd worked for the railroad, or the utility—but last Christmas, when we didn't show up as usual, people worried about him, and finally a couple of men went up there and found the old man in bed, almost starved to death. He'd cut his foot some way—I think his axe had slipped. Anyway, it was gangrenous, and Fred said it would have to come off. But he was so weak—you know, starvation and all—that Fred wouldn't try it. He fixed a bed for the old man in the hospital basement, and he's been awful good to him. I go over sometimes because he doesn't have any other company." She laughed happily. "He always wants to see the President. He seems to think Mr. Truman could fix him up fine."

"How old is 'old McFadden'?"

"Fred thinks he's about eighty-five."

"Good night, Katie!"

Katie's pretty chin set. "Fred says..."

"I know, I know. While there's life there's hope. Well, I'd better get over there if he's doing an amputation. He'll need help."

"Oh, I don't think..." Katie smiled, then, in apology. "He said to come if you were interested. He does amputations alone. He's planned three or four times before this to take off old McFadden's foot, but every time—Still, he says he was much stronger last night, so he may do it. And probably he will let you help him."

Murphy sighed, and got up from the table. As he passed Katie, he hugged her. "If you were anyone else, I'd know you were being nasty."

She turned, her eyes wide. "Oh, Murphy!"

"I know. You mean exactly what you say. But I keep forgetting. Where's my hat?"

"In the side hall."

Circular Describes Strawberry Growing

A new circular of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics offers valuable suggestions to the hundreds of farmers all over the state interested in growing strawberries.

Strawberries were grown in Kentucky in the 1880's on more than 10,000 acres, and may again be grown on several times that acreage, according to wide-spread interest. Where the income from berries was over a million dollars annually, it might now be several times that much.

The circular, which may be obtained at any county agent's office, deals with all phases of growing and selling strawberries. Included is information on the best kinds to grow, soil management, setting the plants, picking and selling the berries, care of the patch, and controlling insects and diseases.

It is stated that "most farmers are not aware of the fact that strawberries can be as profitable as tobacco, or even more so."

Alaska Is Atomic Age Fortress

By GLENN STACKHOUSE
United Press Staff Correspondent
ELEMENDARE AIR FORCE BASE, Alaska — Alaska has become an atomic age fortress with radar beams for lookouts and jet interceptors for cannon.
This Arctic land, with an area twice the size of Texas and a population that could fit comfortably inside the city limits of Phoenix, Ariz., lies just a 15-minute MIG flight from the back door of Soviet Russia.
It sprawls astride the main air route from Russia to the United States. Most military men feel it is over Alaska that Soviet bombers would come if there is ever all-out atomic war against the United States.
For the military, Alaska is strictly an Air Force show. All three services are represented in a unified command, but it is no coincidence the whole shooting match is based by a three-star Air Force general.

The 'Top Cover'
He is Lt. Gen. J. H. Atkinson, a hard-bitten cigar-chewing expert who is well aware his Alaskan command is furnishing the 'top cover' for America.

Army and Navy operations in Alaska are pretty much on a shoe-string basis.
The Navy, under Rear Adm. Kenneth Craig, maintains almost no fleet activities and comparatively insignificant is at Kodiak and its mission is merely to maintain bases in a state of readiness.

The Army, under Maj. Gen. James F. Collins, numbers less than a full division of infantry with headquarters at Fort Richardson, a few miles from Anchorage.

The primary mission of the military is the defense of the United States, not Alaska. The Air Force's early warning radar network is here to furnish the first red alert if bombers streak out of Siberia toward the heart of America.

A Calculated Risk
And Air Force pilots are ready to scramble their rocket-firing F-89 Scorpion jets into the air in an attempt to blast the bombers from the sky before they can reach the inner defense of the homeland.

The defense of Alaska itself is set up on a calculated risk basis. Although it is only a 60-mile trip across the Bering Strait from Russia's Chukotski Peninsula, no one in the military feels the Russians would try an actual invasion of Alaska.

"I don't think there ever will be any big land campaign in Alaska," Atkinson said. "I don't rule out the possibility of at least limited action due to enemy paratroop operations, but these we can handle as they occur."

What if the Soviets try to establish a beachhead on some remote coastal area? "We'd just leave him there," Atkinson said. "He couldn't go anywhere in that kind of country."

tionary war general and our first President, Washington's first love was the farm he called Mount Vernon. There, he was one of the first in the nation to practice contour planting, crop rotations, fertilization, and other soil conservation and improvement methods. It was more than a century after Washington's death before general use was made of many of the sound agricultural practices that he advocated.
